

OUR STORY

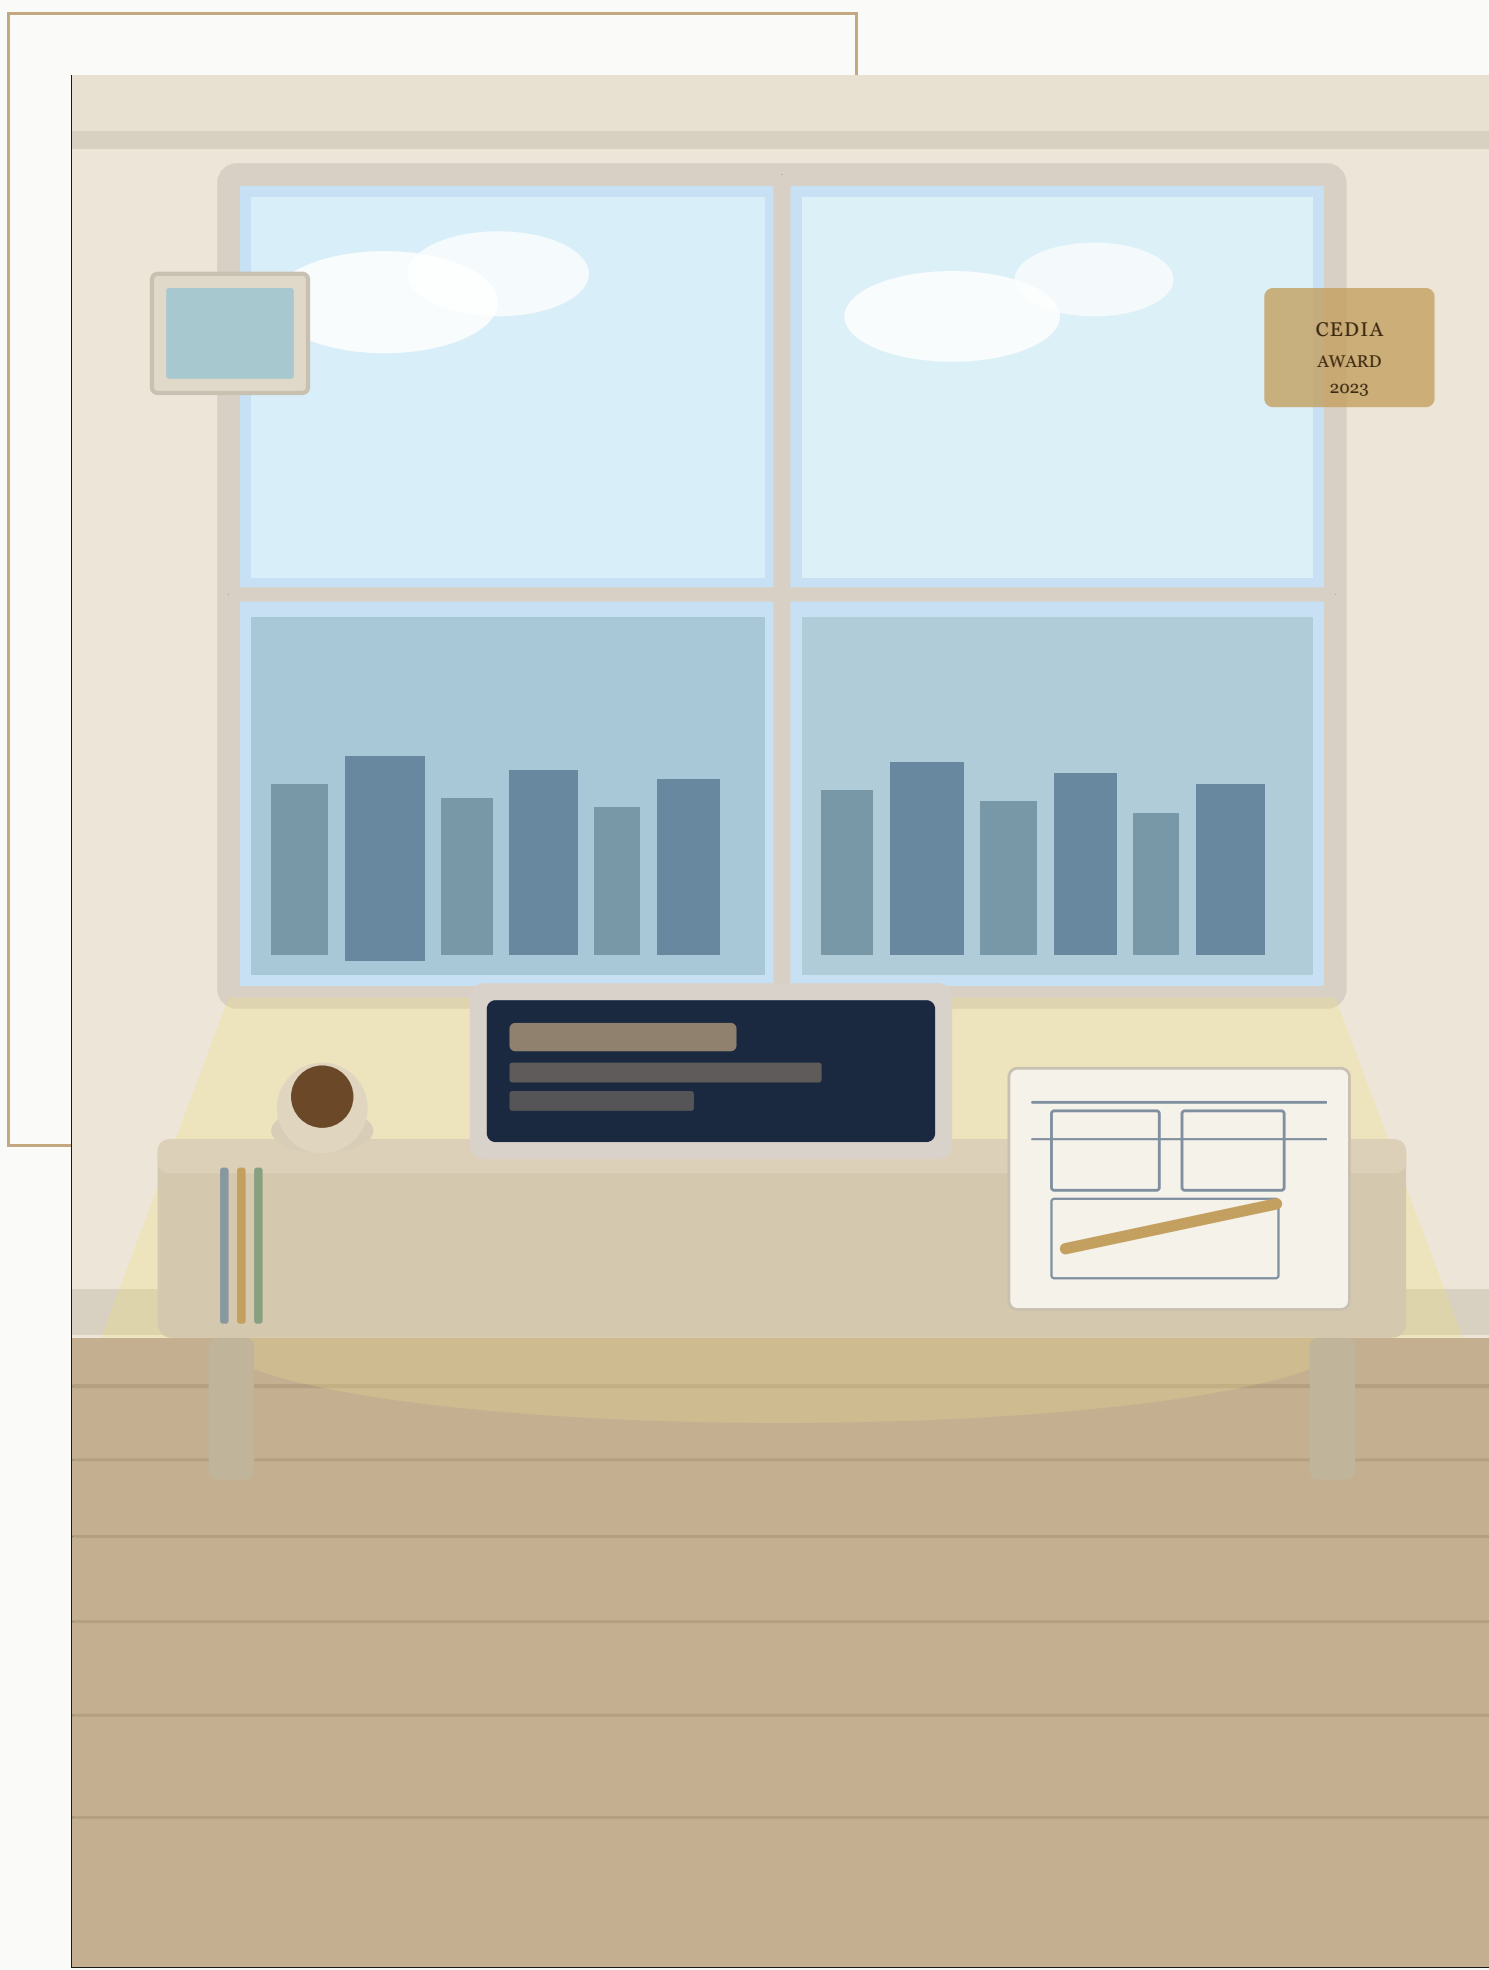

Why we started Luxe Technology.

We didn't set out to start a business. We set out to fix something that kept bothering us.

For years, working inside the smart home and AV industry, we kept seeing the same thing happen. Clients would invest significantly in their homes — working with talented architects, commissioning thoughtful interior designers, spending years on a renovation — only to have the technology let everything down.

Systems that were complicated to use. Installations that looked like an afterthought. Cables that appeared where they shouldn't. Equipment that needed rebooting more often than it worked. And companies that were difficult to reach the moment the job was done.

It wasn't that the technology was bad. The technology was extraordinary. The problem was in how it was being delivered. So in 2012, we started Luxe Technology with a single intention: to be the company we wished existed when we were clients ourselves.

OUR MISSION

"To make the homes of our clients quieter, more beautiful, and more effortless to live in — by designing technology that serves the life happening inside the home, not the other way around."

WHAT WE BELIEVE IN

Three values we don't negotiate on.

01 Invisible is the highest standard. If you notice the technology, we haven't done our job properly. Every cable, every speaker, every control panel we specify should feel like it was always meant to be exactly where it is.	02 Honesty before the sale earns the relationship after it. We will always tell you what we genuinely recommend, not what produces the largest margin for us. If a simpler system does what you need, we'll say so.	03 The project isn't finished until you're completely comfortable. Handover isn't the end of our responsibility — it's the beginning of it. We don't consider a project complete until the people who live in the home can use every system with total confidence.
---	--	---

WHY LUXE TECHNOLOGY

What actually sets us apart — not in the way we'd phrase it in a brochure.

We come in at design stage.

Most AV companies are called in at the end of a project, when the decisions that matter most have already been made. We work with architects and interior designers from the beginning — before first fix, before the floor plans are signed off. That's where we add the most value.

We speak the language of design.

We understand that in a high-end home, every decision is an aesthetic one. We know the technology has to earn the trust of the design team — because it makes their work look better, not worse. We take that responsibility seriously.

We are still there when something needs attention.

Every installation we complete is backed by a support plan, and we remain available to our clients long after the project is done. Technology evolves. How you use your home changes. We're here for both.

We are technology-agnostic.

We don't represent a single brand or system. We specify whatever is genuinely right for each project — whether that's Linn, Sonos, Crestron, Control4, Lutron, or Cisco Meraki. Our loyalty is to the outcome, not to a manufacturer's sales target.

We are a small team, on purpose.

We take on a limited number of projects each year so that every client gets the full attention of our senior team. The person who walks your property at the start is the same person who commissions the system at the end.

Ready to work together?

We'd be very glad to hear about your project. No commitment, no agenda — just a conversation.

GET IN TOUCH